

Tasmania

Tuesday 10th to Saturday 14th November 2026
Small group 10 guests max

From Hobart on the southern tip to Launceston in the north, Tasmania is renowned for having some of the cleanest air and freshest water in the world. On Pure Fresh Island Tastes tour in spring the whole place feels especially alive - rain-fed paddocks glow green, rivers run full, and kitchens turn their attention to the first tender crops of the season.

Dining here is wonderfully diverse. Rustic country cafés, refined city dining rooms and everything in between share a common thread: produce that is grown locally, cooked with understanding, and treated with respect.

Across the island, food producers are more often cottage industries than corporate enterprises. Spring brings fleeting harvests - garlic scapes snipped young from the field, elderflower gathered at peak fragrance, globe artichokes pushing through rich soils, and the first berries ripening slowly under cool skies.

Travelling together, Anthony will chauffeur our private vehicle as we wind our way through two of southern Tasmania's most important food-producing regions - the Derwent Valley and the Huon Valley - linking city, countryside and coast with ease.

Delights of Tasmania's Capital

We begin and end our journey in Hobart, staying at the much-loved Salamanca Wharf Hotel. Spacious, relaxed and perfectly positioned near historic Battery Point, it offers the freedom to start each day your own way.

Our first evening sets the tone with welcome drinks beside the water, followed by a superb dinner celebrating generosity, seasonality and Italian hospitality. An open kitchen, handmade furniture and layered history create an atmosphere made for relaxed dining and good conversation at Peppina.

The best way to understand a city is through its food and drink. Drawing on years of visiting Tasmania, our walking tour introduces some of Hobart's most loved and quietly influential food experiences. We begin at a European-style patisserie, visit an independent bookshop rich with Tasmanian stories, stop at an inner-city coffee house known for cult-status cold brew, and enjoy a private wine tasting led by a local educator exploring Tasmania's cool-climate style.

Your choice of lunch prepared at a classic continental-style delicatessen is enjoyed picnic-style in the dappled shade of a city park. These walking tour venues are just a snapshot - Hobart's food scene continues to evolve, and each year we include worthy newcomers alongside old favourites.

Another morning is devoted to the much-loved Salamanca Market. With local tips on who to seek out, you'll have time to wander, sample and soak up the colour and bustle.

To cap off our time in the city at the conclusion of our tour, we head up the Derwent River by ferry. A visit to the Museum of Old and New Art is highly recommended (entry at your discretion), before gathering for pre-dinner drinks and dinner at Faro. Built into the museum and suspended over the river, this striking space pairs imaginative food with immersive art - from optical illusions to the thrill of moving through one of the world's largest sound-based artworks. This is always an utterly unforgettable dining experience.

The Huon Valley

South of Hobart, the Huon Valley unfolds as a landscape shaped by high rainfall, fertile soils and deep agricultural roots.

Our day begins with old-fashioned dairy values and raw milk cheese, taking a behind-the-scenes look at a small-scale dairy producing the milk for multi-award-winning Bruny Island Cheese. Walking the property among heritage-breed cows grazing beside the river offers insight into a farming system that sits outside the industrial dairy model, allowing different choices around land care, animal welfare and flavour.

Cheese takes centre stage at an exclusive lunch overlooking lush green paddocks.

Time at Fat Pig Farm offers the chance to explore land management, animal husbandry and regenerative farming in practice. Walking through vegetable gardens and apple orchards with Matthew Evans, conversation is open, informed and grounded in lived experience.

We also meet two generations behind Australia's first commercial saffron farm, learning how the world's most expensive spice is grown and harvested. Around 220,000 crocuses are required to produce just one kilogram of saffron, with flowering lasting only six weeks each year. Alongside saffron threads, the family produces tea, gin and other creative expressions of this remarkable crop.

The Derwent Valley

Another day sees us travelling north through the Derwent Valley to the furthest point of our journey. A visit with farming friend Will Bignell offers insight into generations of family farming, seed-saving, diversification and modern rural life, from unusual crops to research into the nutritional value of food raised on the property.

Next comes a long lunch at The Agrarian Kitchen - Gourmet Traveller Restaurant of the Year 2024 and a highlight of the tour. Set within an extraordinary collection of historic buildings, the experience celebrates provenance through growing, teaching and dining.

Our meal reflects months of preparation, with seeds selected, plants nurtured and produce harvested at peak ripeness. A guided walk through the garden sparks conversation about edible gardens, growing philosophies and seasonal cooking, with time to ask questions and learn from the team behind one of Australia's most respected cooking schools.

In nearby New Norfolk, we browse three of Tasmania's most original retail spaces – Miss Arthur, The Drill Hall Emporium and Flywheel – where materials, craftsmanship and story matter.

Between curated experiences, there is space to wander Battery Point, trace Hobart's layered history, walk the waterfront, take in sweeping views from Mount Wellington, or simply sit with a book and watch the world go by.

This tour reflects years of coming and going, friendships formed and sustained, and the quiet privilege of being welcomed back. It is shaped by trust rather than novelty, by people who open their gates because relationships have been built over time.

Five days of unearthing the culinary riches of southern Tasmania will leave you refreshed, invigorated and deeply connected to this remarkable corner of the world.
